CURRENT POSITION

I am an associate professor, lecturer at Department of Ophthalmology, Board Member of the University of Nairobi Graduate School, and an external examiner for several African Universities. In addition, I perform the duties of acting Dean of the School of Medicine as need arises.

I am involved in planning, management, teaching, research, consultancy and outreach activities. The Department has a vibrant outreach network with satellite eye care centres in rural Kenya with strong connection to County health care systems. I have spearheaded the development of several MOUs between the University of Nairobi, County Governments, donor agencies and other institutions. I am actively involved in fundraising for scholarships for staff development and postgraduate students, equipment, consumables and for instructional development.

EDUCATION

In 2012, I became the first Kenyan university lecturer to acquire a doctorate degree in Ophthalmology. I am qualified in both clinical and public health ophthalmology. My formal education includes:

1. 2009-2012: PhD in Ophthalmology, University of Melbourne
2. 1998-1999: Masters of Science in Community Eye Health, University College London (UCL)
3. 1987-1990: Masters of Medicine in Ophthalmology, University of Nairobi
4. 2006, Founder Fellow of the Eastern Africa College of Ophthalmologist (FEACO). The College was expanded in 2012 to create the College of Ophthalmologists of Eastern Central and Southern African region (COECSA)
5. 1978 – 1984, Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery, University of Nairobi
6. A' level 1976 – 1977, Kanunga High School
7. 'O' level 1972-1975, Kianyaga High School
8. 1963 –1971, Mutira Primary School

AWARDS AND SCHOLARSHIPS

1. 2014: Distinguished Neglected Tropical Disease (NTD) Research Award by the Kenya Medical Research Institute (KEMRI) awarded during the annual KEMRI Annual Scientific and Health (KASH) NTD Conference

2. 2012: Centre for Eye Research Australia (CERA) outstanding contribution of a PhD student award: researchers, students and staff at CERA/Department of Ophthalmology of the University of Melbourne vote to select the outstanding PhD research project of the year
